Health and Beauty

There has always been a great deal of importance attached to the success a man makes of his business and the material things he can have and provide for his family. Today this situation is not as pronounced as it has been during certain periods of history.

However, despite our remarkable progress in so many fields, we have still not gotten away from our worship of the material things in life.

This same worship of material things and power is coating many men each year their lives, still others their health.

A typical shrewd business, professional or political figure today usually devotes his attention so closely to business that he could very easily be stricken by a heart attack. They all know this but few have what it takes to withstand the pressure of society.

Usually, careful examination will show that the stricken man has neglected his health by overeating, overwork, too much to drink, too much smoking; he has tolerated badly infected teeth, and failed to take his vacations or get relaxation and rest.

In most cases this man has not only neglected himself, but has neglected his family as well. True, he was working to provide them with an abundance of the world's goods. However, the wife and children involved would have much preferred more of his time and attention.

The cases of women with heart conditions are very much on the increase. This due absolutely to the many demands on the modern homemaker. All too often the attack is brought about by a large dose of trying to "keep up with the Jones."

Vinegars are as different as the foods they season. Cider, distilled white, tarragon, and malt vinegars are made for specific purposes and should be used according, say Extension specialists.

Cider-vinegar .. the all-purpose vinegar .. is a favorite for salads, and salad dressings. Although you can substitute it for distilled white vinegar in preserving fruits and vegetables, it sometimes darkens teh color of foods or causes shriveling.

Distilled white vinegar is absolutely pure and is the best vinegar for pickling and preserving. It has a delicate aroma which accents the true flavor of foods without overpowering them.

Tarragon vinegar..seasoned with herb—is considered an epicurean vinegar. It should be used sparingly, for its flavor is prominent. You can use it in French or sour cream dressings, or in fish or meat sauces. You may also want to substitute it for cider vinegar in meat, fish, or egg salads.

Malt is considered by many to be the finest vinegar. Its rich, full-bodied flavor is an excellent complement for hearty meats of foods, or macaroni. It goes fish and meat sauces, too, should be used

Food Is Subject Of Many False Superstitions

LOS ANGELES—There are almost as many superstitions about food as about the weather, says Dr. Cora Miller, of UCLA.

"One is that if you abstain from drinking water you'll lose fat," she said. "Water, of course, has weight, but it certainly cannot form tissue of any kind, so it cannot possibly fatten."

Dr. Miller, who is making a study of food fads and fallacies, said it's not uncommon to hear individuals seriously proclaim that aluminum cooking pots cause cancer, fish is "brain food," milk causes mucous, and skim milk has had all its food value removed.

"None of these statements is true," she said. "Fish is an excellent food but it won't improve your acuity or insight or raise your I.Q. any more than it'll improve your backstroke."

Proponents of the "brain food" theory have been known to base their belief on the nebulous argument that fish contain iodine which is needed for the thyroid gland which controls the workings of the brain, Dr. Miller said.

The milk-mucous myth probably got started because "the physical character of the proteins in the milk may give them the sensation of a film similar to that experienced in phlegm formation during a cold. However, in a few rare cases, individuals do produce more mucous when drinking milk, but this is in no way harmful.

"And skim milk," Dr. Miller concluded, "contains all the nutrients of the original milk except the fat and fat-soluble substances. The minerals and proteins as well as water-soluble vitamins remain in the skimmed fraction."

Barbituates Cause Increasing Deaths

NEW YORK—Deaths from barbituate poisoning in the United States are on the increase, insurance statisticians report. In 1955, the latest year for which complete data are available, accidental poisoning by barbituates claimed 411 lives, as compared with 345 in 1954, 337 in 1953, and 327 in 1952.

"Careless use of barbituates, predominantly by adults, presents a difficult problem," the statisticians observe. "With more stringent restrictions being placed on their sale in many localities, it is not clear why the improvement in mortality which was recorded from 1949 to 1952 has not continued. It would seem that greater efforts should be made to acquaint the public with the dangers inherent in using such drugs carelessly."

About 30 per cent of all deaths from accidental poisoning by solids and liquids during 1955 were caused by barbituates; this compares with nearly 25 per cent for all other drugs and medicines.

President's China Given For Capitol Display

WASHINGTON — A china bowl and a silver vegetable dish used in the White House during the administration of President Andrew Jackson have been presented to the Smithsonian Institution by the Ladies' Hermitage Association of Nashville, for exhibition with the White House china in First Ladies Hall.

The china bowl is buff colored with stripings of gold and is from one of the Jackson dinner services. The sheffield silver vegetable dish, with a sterling-silver stag's head on the cover, is from the celebrated service that was owned by Commodore Stephen Decatur and which President Jackson purchased in 1833 from the widow of Commodore Decatur.

Housewives Know Best Meats by Tasting

DAVIS, Calif.—Housewives may not always be able to spot a choice grade steak by sight, but they are pretty good at tasting the difference between choice and good.

In a series of tests, two steaks —one good and one choice—were given to a number of families. They were asked to note which one they thought looked better. After the steaks were cooked, they were again asked to judge which one they preferred, on the basis of juiciness, tenderness and flavor.

About half preferred the looks of the choice grade and half the good grade. But as to the meat, 75 per cent preferred the choice steaks.

All Worn Out

CHICAGO—What is commonly known as "tired eyes" is, in fact, a general fatigue of the mind and body as well as the muscles of the body that control the face around the eyes. The eyes themselves are capable of enormous use. Bad lighting causes squints and frowns which are another cause of tired face muscles around the eyes. This causes fatigue and even grumpiness, and a person who doesn't frown or squint is often happier person.
